

Applications being accepted for...

The Politics & Journalism Semester

Fall 2012 Class
September 4 to December 21, 2012
The Watergate, Washington, DC

Training the next generation of political journalists, since 1989.

- ✓ 9-12 students selected nationally each semester, from over 50 participating universities; and direct applicants from other schools in the U.S., Canada and abroad
- ✓ Twice-weekly seminars in all aspects of politics, featuring top national political reporters, elected and party officials, political consultants and operatives, and interest group leaders
- ✓ Full-time, 16-week internships at major news bureaus in Washington, D.C.
- ✓ $3,000 stipend to each student for the semester; no tuition or fees
- ✓ Open to college journalists: juniors, seniors, graduate students and recent graduates (foreign students with excellent spoken and written English skills are eligible)
- ✓ Nominees from participating journalism schools and direct applicants from other colleges due April 6, 2012

Stipend
$3,000
No tuition or fees.

*Brochure, application form, list of participating schools,
and other information available at our web site:*

www.wcpj.org
(go to "Application" page)

Sponsored by the

Washington Center for Politics & Journalism

A non-partisan, non-profit foundation to promote greater understanding of politics by journalists and journalism by politicians.

Board of Directors: Tony Blankley, Eleanor Clift, Joe Foote, Debbie LeHardy, Terry Michael, Robert Pierre, Juan Williams, and Judy Woodruff

Some of our speakers....

George Stephanopoulos, GMA/ThisWeek; Jon Karl, ABC News and Kevin Madden, Romney '08; Judy Woodruff, PBS; and General Colin Powell